

This publication marks the return of the “Hanoverian” after a year-long hiatus. Bi-monthly digital and printed versions of “@Hanover” helped bridge the gap between issues, keeping alumni, friends and other constituents informed throughout 2020. The positive response to these frequent publications has re-energized the College’s desire to share campus news and information in a more-timely manner.

Acting on that ambition, the “Hanoverian” will now be published four times each year. The magazine, sporting a smaller, yet familiar format, will continue to highlight Hanover happenings through a blend of campus news and sports, features and profiles, historical pieces and photographs.

Hanoverian Eternal and Class Notes, two traditional features of the College’s magazine, now each have a virtual home on Hanover’s alumni website. As part of the format change, Class Notes will no longer be published in the “Hanoverian” following this issue. Both online components, however, will be frequently updated to share current and time-sensitive news about the lives of Hanoverians.

Through periodic changes in format, content and appearance, the “Hanoverian” has continued to serve as a source of Hanover news and information for nearly 150 years. I hope you find this issue to be informative, appealing and a useful resource focusing on the life of the College. It is our hope that the increased number of printed issues - especially when combined with Hanover’s website, social media platforms and “@Hanover” digital newsletter - will help strengthen the connection between the College and Hanoverians around the globe

Upgrades bolster campus services, physical plant

A substantial number of completed and nearly finished upgrades to Hanover's campus will have a lasting impact on services and quality of life for students and employees.

Donner Hall is nearing the final stretches of an 18-month effort to enhance the 81-year-old residence hall with improved accessibility, air conditioning, expanded restrooms and new flooring, ceilings and paint. The project, part of an $8.5 million plan to upgrade the College's first-year housing, is slated for completion in time for the beginning of the 2021-22 academic year.

Important enhancements to the College's campus-wide drainage system are nearing completion after nearly three years of work. New, wider sidewalks are being installed throughout the Quad as part of the final stages.

In December, the Haq Center for Cross-Cultural Education was relocated to a high-traffic area on the first floor of the J. Graham Brown Campus Center. The Haq Center, previously in Lynn Hall and the Withrow Activities Center, now thrives in the space previously utilized as the Alumni Lounge.

The Horner Health and Recreation Center's 6,000-square-foot fitness center now sports an energizing appearance with vibrant wall graphics and new fitness equipment. Through the fall, the popular campus workout facility was enhanced with contemporary weight and aerobic machines, free weights and shock-absorbing flooring.

The COVID-19 pandemic spurred last summer's relocation of Health Services to a stand-alone location just west of the Horner Center. The clinic now features separate entrances and waiting rooms for well and sick patients, three triage rooms and four overnight-care rooms.

The former Health Services location, on the second floor of the Campus Center, is currently being transformed into office spaces for members of the Office of Advancement staff. The renovation allows for the centralization of the College's donor-engagement and alumni relations efforts.

Major literary award to be named for Shields

After nearly 10 years of planning, the late Carol Warner Shields '57 will be honored as the namesake for one of the world's richest literary awards.

Beginning in 2022, the Carol Shields Prize for Fiction will feature a $150,000 cash award to a single work of fiction by a female or non-binary author of an English-language book published in the U.S. or Canada. In addition, $12,500 cash awards will be presented to a short list of finalists.

Shields, who held dual U.S. and Canadian citizenships, was an educator, editor, author, playwright and career-long advocate and mentor for women writers. Her 1993 novel, "The Stone Diaries," became the only work to win both the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in the U.S. and the Governor General's Award in Canada.

Shields, the mother of five children, died in 2003. She was 68 years old.

Ellis selected as H.A.R.T. Award honoree

Steve Ellis '72 was presented with the Hanover Alumni Recruitment Team's H.A.R.T. for Hanover Award for his efforts to support the College's new-student recruitment efforts.

Ellis, who resides in Louisville, Ky., has donned many Hanover hats through the years, including student, faculty member and recruiter. He has attended numerous recruitment events, served as an interviewer for the Crowe Scholarship competition and sent personal, hand-written notes of congratulations more than 200 newly admitted students.

Started in 2018, the Hanover Alumni Recruitment Team aims to capitalize on the experience, reach and energy of Hanoverians to connect with prospective students. The initiative supports the Office of Admission with referrals and correspondence and, when available, as a presence at high school and college fairs and hosts/sponsors for regional events.

Lambert honored for service to Boy Scouts

Hanover President Lake Lambert has been honored for his dedication and service to the Boy Scouts of America.

Lambert was presented with the District Award of Merit by the Hoosier Trails Council, Muscatatuck District. The honor recognizes a highly regarded leader (scouter) following recommendations from adult volunteers in the district.

Lambert, himself an Eagle Scout, was also honored for his service on the Hoosier Trails Council Executive Board, which governs three districts within an 18-county area in south-central Indiana. Since 2017, he has served among the council's voting group of volunteers to decide budgets, expenditures, operations, activities and recruitment initiatives.

Board of Trustees adds seven new members

The Hanover College Board of Trustees has added seven members in the past year. Newcomers to the board include Alice Clark '72, Riki Crowe '17, Dr. Brian Haag '74, Rev. Felipe Martinez, DMin., Edwin Narley '15, Scott Pearson '77 and Bryan Ruder '13.

Clark, who resides in Redlands, Calif., is the retired chief operating officer at J.P. Morgan Chase's Moscow office.

Crowe, from Indianapolis, is an ecommerce website specialist at Sigma Theta Tau International Honors Society of Nursing.

Haag is a renal and trauma specialist, volunteer and assistant professor at Marian University. He lives in Indianapolis.

Martinez, who resides in Columbus, Ind., serves as pastor at First Presbyterian Church and chair for the board of directors of the Synod of Lincoln Trails.

Narley is a vice president at Goldman Sachs. He lives in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Pearson, from Jackson, Ga., is president of Peterbilt of Atlanta, LLC.

Ruder is an associate vice president at Stifel Financial Corporation. He resides in Evansville, Ind.

In addition to the recent additions, Michael Zeddies '77 has returned after a mandatory rotation off the board. Zeddies, who lives in Chicago, is president and owner Midland Marketing Inc.

Grant funds Duggan Library's racial equity collection

The Duggan Library received a grant from Indiana Humanities to build a circulating collection of materials focusing on racial equity and related issues.

The Advancing Racial Equity Collection Development Grant provides funding for Hanover's library to purchase print and electronic books, as well as DVDs, to explore racial equity and social justice issues. Featured materials address a wide range of topics, including civil rights, culture, discrimination, law and policing, poverty, race and racism, religion and many more. The array of resources offers selections appropriate for adults, teenagers and young children.

The collection, made possible with funds from Lilly Endowment Inc., includes more than 40 works, ranging from classic to contemporary.

Mentoring program to promote student success

The COACH Mentoring Program debuts this winter as a vital bond between Hanover's students and alumni.

A joint effort between the Levett Career Center and Office of Alumni Relations, COACH was created to allow students to tap into the vast array of careers, expertise and life experiences of Hanoverians around the globe.

COACH consists of two programs. The formal program, open only to sophomores, emphasizes establishing and fostering structured, goal-driven, one-to-one relationships with mentors. The informal program, "In Your Court," makes general or career-specific mentorship available to all students.

COACH's volunteer mentors will help students navigate the numerous issues associated with college life, ranging from career exploration and preparation, choosing a major and balancing academic and social life, to skill set development, financial responsibility and post-college plans. Mentors, meanwhile, will not only enhance their connection with the College, but create essential relationships with life-long benefits.

CLIMATE CHANGE

HANOVER STRIVES TO CREATE A MORE JUST CAMPUS

Widespread social unrest during the summer of 2020 will long be remembered for the nightly images of injustice, outrage and violence. The blatant display of the division among social, economic and racial groups in our nation was not only alarming, but also catalytic. The chaos produced a real opportunity for individuals, communities, businesses and other entities to reflect on their policies, procedures and treatment of others.

The Hanover College community was certainly not immune from the unrest.

Following those weeks of racially charged protests across the U.S., Hanover's Office of Multicultural Affairs hosted three nights of virtual conversations to examine equity issues on campus. "Black Lives, Justice and Healing," held June 9-11, attracted nearly 200 online participants, including President Lake Lambert, former President Sue DeWine and dozens of students, employees and trustees.

The open forum tackled current issues with a focus on the experiences of the College's Black students and other students of color. The discussions, at times insightful, critical, uncomfortable and hopeful, offered a striking perspective on the state of race relations not only in the nation, but especially on Hanover's campus.

In late September, hundreds of the College's students and employees gathered at the Quad in a coordinated, moving display of unity following the deaths of Breonna Taylor and George Floyd. During the event, student leaders expressed not only outrage, angst and demands for justice, but also a call for equality and hope.

"To be on a campus and be safe, and know we can speak freely, that is why being at Hanover is so important for us," stated Lauryn Steele '22, president of Sister-2-Sister, following the march.

The College's history of equity and diversity through its 194 years of existence is complex and not always proud. Spurred by the turbulence – especially the outcry from the College's students, alumni and employees – Hanover has renewed its commitment to create a community where all are welcome and feel at home.

Many of the ideals and ideas presented during the mid-summer conversations and September campus march have resulted in action during this academic year.

"We are developing a far-reaching equity and inclusion plan for the College," said Lambert in a late-summer message to the campus community. "We should make decisions together with those who will be most affected by them."

A key endeavor is the establishment of Hanover's first Equity and Inclusion Committee to champion campus-wide efforts. The committee, chaired by Provost Carey Adams and Vice President for Student Life Dewain Lee, includes members of the student body, faculty, staff and trustees.

In January, Hanover truly honored Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day for the first time by cancelling classes, providing community service opportunities and hosting multiple virtual conversations about equity issues, including the on-campus experiences of Black alumni and current students.

The daylong celebration also included the debut of a new, prominent location for the Haq Center for Cross-Cultural Education.

Named to honor Hanover professors Anwarul and Mythili Haq, the Haq Center was launched in the 1980s and was previously situated in the Faculty Office Building, Lynn Hall and, recently, the Withrow Activities Center. It is now located in the J. Graham Brown Campus Center in the former Alumni Lounge, a high-traffic area adjacent to the entrance to the main dining room.

"This is extremely important because, for many, this new center will become their safe space," remarked Sam Piacente '22, president of Hanover Kings and Queens, at the open house. "The Haq Center is a place for students from all backgrounds to come together, so having a more central and bigger center will allow more students to build community and create a sense of belonging on our campus."

While the formation of the Equity and Inclusion Committee and campus-wide events represent measurable progress, more work continues outside of public view. A number of initiatives will have an impact on the College's policies, procedures and creation of a more just campus.

- The Community Alliance and Resource Team (CART) exists to support members of the campus community who observe or experience acts of discrimination or harassment based on sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, race, religion or disability. Through CART, a prompt campus notification system has been created for transparency regarding bias events, which includes Hanover's response to those events.
- The College's hiring practices now require a diversity plan for all employment searches whenever a new position is created or a vacancy is filled. No hires can be made until policies for equal opportunity have been met.
- Anti-bias training is now required for all paid student leaders, including resident assistants, tutors, organization officers, athletic team captains and others.
- In January, Hanover's staff were required to attend a half-day diversity, equity, inclusion and anti-racism training session provided by the Louisville, Ky.-based Muhammad Ali Center.
- Including a focus on accessibility as part of a new campus master plan.

"To be on a campus and be safe, and know we can speak freely, that is why being at Hanover is so important for us."

LAURYN STEELE '22

"I know these actions are the beginning and that our work is not complete," said Lambert. "With these initiatives, Hanover is taking positive steps towards becoming the more equitable and inclusive institution that our students, alumni and employees deserve."

While still a work-in-progress, the College's equity and inclusion endeavors are already making positive strides. The early efforts by the campus community have been noticed and appreciated by Hanover's students.

"I feel like more voices are being heard and more action is being taken by the administration," added Britney Hernandez '22, president of Latino Student Union. "People have become more willing to lend a helping hand."

"It is really impressive that President Lambert is going through with the diversity plan," noted Alex Edison '22, president of Black Student Union. "It is an active thing that is happening instead of just an empty promise."

YOUR LEGACY SECURES OUR FUTURE

A strong endowment creates the solid foundation to make the Hanover experience possible for future generations. Endowed funds provide essential financial support for all aspects of the College, especially its students, faculty, academic programs and career-centered endeavors. In recent months, Hanover's endowment has received generous support, including these new legacy commitments:

The "Catfish" Endowed Fund for Baseball

Established by Steve Voss '74 (lovingly nicknamed Catfish during his days on the Hanover baseball team), the fund underwrites the expenses of Hanover's baseball program, including the baseball intern position, travel and uniforms.

The George P. and Shirley E. Clark Scholarship

Created by Alice L. Clark '72 and John Martens, this endowed scholarship honors Alice's parents, who cherished their time as members of the Hanover College community. It will be awarded to English and foreign language majors who demonstrate financial need and are in good academic standing.

The Pugh Family Endowed Fund for General Use

Established by Larry Pugh '66 and Nancy Morris Pugh '67, the fund exists in perpetuity to support the annual expenses of the College, including student scholarships, campus maintenance and beautification, and general operating needs.

The Richard and Sandra Scamehorn Endowed Fund for Summer Research Fellows

Created by Dr. Richard Scamehorn '64 and Sandra Nice Scamehorn '64, this fund supports students and faculty working together on summer research in the sciences.

The William F. Stephan Endowed Fund for Chemistry

Established by Bill Stephan '57, the fund provides permanent support for Hanover's chemistry programs and scholarship opportunities for the best and brightest chemistry students. Annual scholarships are awarded from the fund to deserving students who are third- and fourth-year chemistry majors. The fund also provides annual operating support for the chemistry department.

The Yakey Family Endowed Scholarship Fund for Spring Term International Study

Created by Wallace "Ace" Yakey '75 and Beth Brodrick Yakey '75, the fund will provide a scholarship for a spring term experience abroad for a student who has not previously traveled outside of the country and who demonstrates financial need.

Interested in making a never-ending gift? Endowments can be established with a single gift or series of gifts to meet the minimum fund requirement of $25,000.

For more information on how you can create a legacy at Hanover, call 812.866.6813 or visit hanover.edu/giving.

TERRELL W. ROBINSON

First Sigma Chi member of color
Inspiration for "Proclamation of 1969"

Terrell W. Robinson, 70, died Jan. 14, 2021, in Jersey City, N.J.

Robinson became the first Black member of Sigma Chi Fraternity in 1969, a time when the fraternity did not initiate people of color. He is the inspiration for the "Proclamation of 1969," which detailed that memberships would be extended to men based solely on the content of their character. The document, at the time unanimously signed by members of Hanover's Chi Chapter, endures as a teaching tool and reminder of openness and diversity for Sigma Chi.

Born Nov. 21, 1950, in Tuskegee, Ala., Robinson graduated from Tuskegee High School in 1969 and earned a bachelor's degree at Hanover in 1974.

He was a stalwart actor in the theatre department during his years at the College. He performed in a variety of roles, including "The White House Murder Case," "East of the Sun, West of the Moon" and "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground." He also performed as part of the cast of "A Man's a Man," which was named one of the nation's top-10 productions at the 1973 American College Theatre Festival and staged at the Eisenhower Theatre in Washington, D.C.

After his graduation from Hanover, Robinson traveled to New York City and became a regular performer in many of Robert Wilson's early avant-garde theatre pieces. He also performed at the Off-Broadway houses LaMaMa Experimental Theater Club and Negro Ensemble Company. In October 2015, he returned to Hanover to perform in an all-alumni staging of "You Can't Take It With You."

Robinson was preceded in death by his father, Julius Robinson, and his mother, Florence Robinson.

He is survived by his brothers, Julius C. Robinson Jr. and Harold E. Robinson, three nieces and three nephews.

Class Notes is now available on Hanover's alumni website. Submissions are encouraged and will be frequently updated online, including photos, personal notes and links to news items, when available. This resource will allow Hanoverians to share important events in their lives in a timely manner. Please note, Class Notes will no longer be published in the "Hanoverian" following this issue.

Throughout its storied history, Hanover College's financial stability has been ensured by planned gifts.

Estate plans transform campus and define student experiences for generations. Regardless of size - whether a bequest in a will or the designation of Hanover as the beneficiary of a retirement account, life income gift or insurance policy - planned gifts secure the donor's legacy, even living forever as part of the College's endowment.

The 1827 Society recognizes the vision and benevolence of alumni and friends who shape campus life by including Hanover in their estate plans. Each year, members receive invitations to special donor activities and events, access to the College's financial-planning specialists, recognition in publications and an exclusive gift.

To explore your planned giving vision, create your legacy or learn more about The 1827 Society, contact Kevin Berry '90, senior director of individual philanthropy, at 812.866.6813 or berry@hanover.edu.

Unique to you, Benefits for all

Endowments secure Hanover College's future by ensuring our distinctive campus experience is possible for generations to come.

Creating your personalized endowed fund is simple, rewarding and impactful. An endowment can be established with a single minimum gift of $25,000 or with a series of gifts paid through several years to meet the fund requirements.

Endowed funds may reflect your personal interests. Many existing funds honor a donor's family, loved one or favorite professor, support a major or favorite organization, or even ensure an academic or social experience. All endowments benefit the College's mission and its students.
