OF THE
ALUMNI AND FORMER STUDENTS OF HANOVER COLLEGE.

NOTE.

No one can be more sensible of the imperfections of this catalogue than the compilers. Every effort, however, has been made to have it as complete as possible. A vast deal of labor has been given in correspondence, and in personal investigation, to try to find out something about all the old students. This could have been done had we known where to have gone for the information in each case. In order that a complete record of all, who have ever attended the college, may be obtained, we would ask every one, into whose hands a copy of this catalogue may come, to send to the Committee any corrections or information in reference to any mentioned herein. We hope this catalogue may help in binding together the scattered Alumni and former students of Hanover, and in bringing them into closer sympathy with the dear old college.

Our thanks are due to all the friends, who have helped in securing information; and especially to Rev. T. W. McCoy for help in the preparation of manuscript; and to the printer, Mr. W. W. Crozier, for his patience and carefulness, and the neatness with which he has done his work.

HISTORICAL.

THE real origin of Hanover College was in the year 1825, when two pioneer ministers, John F. Crowe and John M. Dickey, after a conference as to the best means of supplying the scattered churches with the preaching of the gospel, determined that the ministers for this purpose must be trained on the ground. The ministers who came from the East could not endure the burdens and hardships incident to the new country life. Rev. Messrs. Hickman, Searle, Day, Trimble and Young, after a short, but earnest and faithful service, had fallen beneath the fatigues and privations of the wilderness, and the churches to which they had ministered were left shepherdless. Messrs. Crowe and Dickey, at the next meeting of their Presbytery, urged the necessity of providing a native ministry with so much effect that the Presbytery appointed them a committee to select a spot for the location of a Presbyterian school and to draft a plan for its organization.

Hanover was selected as the site, and the manual labor system as the plan for the school. The report was adopted by Presbytery, and the same committee was empowered to procure a teacher and open the school. Owing to the difficulty of finding a suitable teacher, Dr. Crowe, with whom the plan of this school originated, determined to commence the school himself, hoping that when once organized and in successful operation, there would be less difficulty in securing a teacher.

On the 1st of January, 1827, in a log cabin, 16x18 feet, the school was opened with six pupils, and solemnly dedicated to God. The number gradually increased until the winter session of 1828 opened with 14 students. The following session the number had increased to 20. An outpouring of God's Spirit, during the winter of 1828, brought 8 of the 14 to a saving knowledge of Christ, and awakened an interest in the new school among the surrounding churches. This was but an instance of what has frequently happened in the history of Hanover College. Much of her early history especially would be a history of God's grace in revivals of His people.

The first catalogue says, "At this time our log building was found 'too strait for us,' and the school was removed to the meeting house. As this accommodation could not be calculated on permanently, the necessity of a more commodious house urged itself on the mind of the teacher, and he determined on the erection of a brick building, 25 by 40 feet, two stories high. But he found himself without funds, and without patrons who could supply them. The object, however, of keeping together the little band of devoted youth, who were ardently desirous to serve their Master in His vineyard, and of preparing, with the blessing of God, a supply for the increasing wants of the church, appeared so important that he determined to go forward in the enterprise, trusting in God for the means of its accomplishment. For this purpose a subscription was opened, of the following kind: The students pledged themselves to throw up a sufficient quantity of earth to make 80,000 brick. The teacher bound himself to board the hands while making the brick, and to furnish wood to burn them. Another individual subscribed rock for the foundation, and another the building it. One man subscribed a sufficient number of stocks at the saw-mill to make all the lumber needed for the building; and another the hauling of the lumber, &c. In this manner the work was carried on, and a building completed worth $1,000, while the amount of cash actually expended, was less than $400. One-fourth of this sum was paid by two individuals; the balance was obtained by contributions in Madison and the neighborhood. Williamson Dunn, Esq., donated the beautiful lot which forms the college campus, together with six lots in the village."

The building mentioned above was afterwards one of the wings of the college building; and traces of the foundation may yet be seen on the east side of what is now the village church.

The second college edifice was erected in 1832. It was three stories high, and contained dormitories, recitation rooms and society halls. The third story and one wing of the building was wrecked by the tornado, July 4, 1837. After the storm the third story was taken down, and later the building was formed into what is now the Presbyterian church of Hanover.

The present college building, situated on the point overlooking the Ohio River, was commenced in 1853, completed and ready for occupancy in 1857.

In 1828 the Presbytery applied to the Legislature for a charter, which was granted, with ample privileges, to a corporate body, under the style of "The Board of Trustees of Hanover Academy." That the manual labor system might be put into operation, Judge Williamson Dunn and Dr. John F. Crowe gave to the corporation, each fifty acres of land, lying adjacent to the Academy, for a farm. The manual labor system, however, proved a failure and was abandoned in 1835.

In 1829 the Presbytery transferred the care of the Academy to the Synod of Indiana, and that body made arrangements with the Board of Trustees to open a Theological Department under the provisions of the charter. The Theological Department was opened in 1830, and Rev. John Matthews, D. D., of Shepherdstown, Va., was unanimously elected Professor of Theology by the Synod.

In 1833 the institution was chartered as Hanover College. When the attempt was made, however, to remove the college to Madison, in 1844, this charter was surrendered; but a new and more liberal one, granting the privileges and powers of a university, was obtained by the Board in December, 1844.

In 1880 the Board of Trustees admitted young ladies to all the privileges of the college.

In a sketch of this kind it would be unpardonable not to mention the generous benefactors of the college. The principal ones are Rev. Dr. John F. Crowe, Hon. Williamson Dunn, Mrs. Mary T. Lapsley, Rev. William A. Holliday, John King, Esq., Silas C. Day, Rev. James A. McKee, D. D., Mrs. Sally Donnell, and the Lanier family. Others of smaller means, but of equal liberality, whose names will not be forgotten by God or man, in the early annals of Presbyterianism in Indiana, have added from time to time to the resources of the college.

One of the most pressing needs, and the one specially felt by those in charge of the institution, is a suitable Scientific Hall. Twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars would erect this building. Will not some man of large means and large piety provide this building for the college?

Among the other needs of the college may be mentioned additional endowment for existing and for new Professorships, and funds to add to the Library, Apparatus, and general outfit.

Friends of the college of smaller means, who have not the money to endow a Professorship or erect a building, might endow an alcove in the Library. Three thousand dollars would be sufficient for this purpose. Such a gift would be a suitable memorial of some friend or relative.

It is impossible to estimate the influence which Hanover College has exerted for Christian civilization and the building up of the Redeemer's kingdom during the sixty-two years of her existence. To write her history, would be to write, in a large measure, the religious, political and social history of our western country. Six hundred and sixty have graduated from her walls since the first class went out in 1833. Three thousand more have been partly trained within her halls, and gone forth to the pulpit, the bar, the editor's room; to fields of usefulness in every department of life. Hanover, with her students at work in every field of useful employment, has touched the boundaries of this great land, and girdled the world with her influence; and in Mexico, and South America, and Italy, and Japan, and China, and Corea, and India, and the islands of the sea, her sons and daughters are found laboring for the elevation of humanity, and the redemption of the world.

CATALOGUE OF THE ALUMNI

AND

FORMER STUDENTS OF HANOVER COLLEGE.

The Alumni Association in 1883, published a complete historical catalogue of the Alumni. In the present catalogue, in addition to the Alumni, the names of all the former students of the college are given, with the date of entrance, together with the profession, or occupation, and residence, wherever known. In the case of the deceased, besides the profession, the date and place of death are given.

The dead are marked with the asterisk (*).

As has been stated in the historical sketch, Dr. Crowe began his school with six boys on the first day of January, 1827. It is impossible to determine definitely who the "six boys" were, but the best information gives the following as those who were present during the first year: Noble Butler, Daniel Lattimore, Samuel Lattimore, David V. Smock, James Logan, William Taylor, J. M. Tilford, James McNutt.

Under 1832 are given all whose names appear in the first catalogue of 1832-3. Of course some of them entered before, some as early as 1827, but it is impossible to determine the exact date.

The first class was graduated in 1834. After that date, those students not graduated are put down under the class—the year in which they entered college.
